Abstract

As a part of academic requirement and completion of Regular Master of Business Administration program, I have been assigned to complete thesis report on "Recruitment Process in Bangladesh: A Case Study on Universal Menswear Ltd." under my supervisor Md. Rasel Hawlader.

As usual, primary data and secondary data were used to prepare this report. Primary data came from my day to day observation and interviewing employees. Secondary data were collected by Organizational employees, hand book, website, and relevant books. I tried to minimize bias and produce and unbiased report.

"Recruitment Process" is a slice of human resource process, as such I have selected this topic to make it clear.

As a Senior Executive (HR & Compliance) in a reputed organization "Universal Menswear Ltd." I have tried to go through their Recruitment Process to employee within my tenure of last six years.

The report starts with a general introduction "Universal Menswear Ltd." and then comes the introduction of "Universal Menswear Ltd." as well as origin of the report, Statement of research problem, Objective of the report. The Mission and Vision of "Universal Menswear Ltd." are also discussed. Then this report proceeds onto the preliminary discussion about the products of "Universal Menswear Ltd."

After that I tried to shed a light on the HR structure of Universal Menswear Ltd. All the function of HR department is briefly described here. After that I continue on the main focus of the report "Recruitment Process in Bangladesh: A Case Study on Universal Menswear Ltd." describing the different steps are well described.

After completion of this report it can easily be said that efficient, competent and active part in Human Resource Management practices take a company to the peak of the success.

Executive summary

The garment industry of Bangladesh has been the key revenue generating sector for the last couple of years. At present, the country generates about $9.35 billion worth of products each year by exporting garments product. The industry provides employment to about 3 million workers of whom 80% are women. Universal Menswear Ltd. is one of the emerging garments in our country. I have conducted my thesis in this organization in the Human Resources Department. Currently it consists of 4,850 employees and generated revenue of 3 million dollars per year. The company was established in 2012 and its located in Adamjee EPZ, Siddhirganj, Narayanganj. During my whole thesis tenure, I have worked in several sectors of Human Resources Department of the Garment's Production and Manufacturing Sectors. The Human Resource Department of the Garment is the most crucial department which has to work with the daily manpower and the resources. As an intern I didn't get the chance to work in every sector very deeply but I had my contribution on the marketing department. A big promoter of the industry till now has been the cheap labor in our country. However, recent political developments are creating a barrier to this sector. Moreover, workers are now well-aware of the high profits enjoyed by the companies, and as a result demanding higher salary. This is the same problem that is circling Universal Menswear Ltd. The company's biggest drawback is the high labor turnover which is directly arising for this sole reason. As a result, the company's HR department has taken steps to tackle this problem. The solution that I helped to come up with, is creating a better working environment and preventing and monitoring the commission received by the line managers from the labors, so that no injustice occurs to them.

CHAPTER ONE

1.1 Introduction

In order to fulfill my RMBA program with major in human resource I have experienced to work in a Garments Industry Universal Menswear Ltd. After completion the theoretical part I was assigned to work on Recruitment Process of Universal Menswear Ltd. for practical part. Here I was given with the facility combine my theoretical knowledge with the practical knowledge field. I have tried to cover different contents of HR area during this internship period. I have enriched my knowledge on general HR aspects of the company as well as identified some issues which are being hindrance in the growth of the company. A SWOT analysis on the Recruitment Process of Universal Menswear Ltd followed by discussing the critical points arisen during the work time and tried to put some recommendations on it according to my knowledge.
My project was on the Recruitment Process at Universal Menswear Ltd

1.2 Scope of the report:

It was my great pleasure that during the time of preparing this report, I got cooperation to discuss each and every aspect of the HR related activities of the company which includes some confidential data of the employee and some other major facts. So the scope of the report making was vast from my end. As an intern, I got every kind of facility to study and work on each and every area of human resource department and an extensive discussion with the current employees made it easier for me to lead to an effective conclusion.

1.3 Objectives of the report:

There are two objectives of this report:

Broad objective: To gather an overall idea on HR functions of the garment company.

Specific Objectives: Specific objectives are as follows -

- To identify Recruitment process in the right way.
- To identify the HR core responsibilities and implementing it in the right way.
- To acquire depth knowledge on all the key area of HR.
- To scan the practical scenario of the organization.
- To identify the challenges and opportunities of the facility.
- To propose changes for the development of the HR section.

1.4 Methodology:

Data was collected through previous documents, archival records and highly dependent on observation. Main source of data is open ended interview and observation. Type of data collected for the report:

1.4.1 Secondary data analysis:

In this report I have basically focused on secondary data analysis. This means the information of this report has been collected from company database and company past record files. Also data collected from Human Resource Manual and textbooks from various libraries.

1.4.2 Primary data analysis:

For the main prospect of my report I have decided to use primary data analysis. For this

I have structured a small survey using the "descriptive research design" in the perspective of recruitment and selection department of the company. I also interviewed my supervisor Md. Billal Hossain, Head of Admin, HR & Compliance who totally involved with employee relations and talent management.

The research itself is both the mixture of Quantitative & Qualitative research: In the qualitative part it is an unstructured, exploratory research methodology based on small samples indented to provide insight and understanding of the selection and recruitment department's activity.
But in case of qualitative side I have used structured questioner method and used standard sample size from the population of the whole recruitment and selection department as I have mentioned before the research design I have used in this analysis is "Descriptive Research Design" Under descriptive research design we know there are two types of methods are normally used they are:

1. Survey method

2. Observation method

For my analysis I have used the survey method. This method works by obtaining information based on questioning of respondents. Respondents are asked a variety of questions regarding their behavior, intentions, attitudes, awareness and motivations. Questions are basically asked either verbally or in writing or both in same time. In this case I have decided to use the structured questioner format and asked the questions both verbally and allowed them to write the answers. I followed also the observation method, where I have learned many things by the official environments and colleagues. Observation also based on personal experiences shared by the fellow in the Group.

1.4.3The sampling design process:

I have developed the sample number for my research by using the structure below which explains how I have determined the sample size of the human resource functions department of the company.

Defining the target population

Selecting the sampling technique

Determining the sample size

Step 1.
First of all, in determining the target population I have decided to use the people working in the human resource functions of Universal Menswear Ltd.

Step 2.
In the selection of the sampling technique I have decided to use the probability sampling technique. More specifically I have used the systematic sampling technique under the probability sampling.

Sampling Technique → Probability sampling → Systematic sampling

Step 3.
In determining the sampling size as my research is small and only considering the human resource functions of Universal Menswear Ltd. So the size of the sample is 5 and total population of HR is 15.

1.5 Limitations

a) The study is undertaken considering and outs of the Human Resource practices based on the Human Resource Manual of Universal Menswear Ltd 2012), and on personal experiences shared by the fellow in then factory. Personal biases and inconsistencies in the HR Manual with the current practices may be possible setbacks.

b) A relatively short period of internship may also be a reason to possibly overlook certain misunderstandings or unfound details that may be of valued importance.

c) Unavailability of data could be due to engagement of the current employees in Universal Menswear Ltd. Experienced employees could have provided the required data.

d) A good number of entrepreneurs are themselves ignorant about using the HR policies not only to recruit and put employees on payroll, but also to help them achieve their goal the swiftest ways of possible. Due to shortage of time and opportunity collected data could not be possible to compare with the data from other entrepreneurs.

1.6 Goal of the Study:

To find out the main mismanagement regarding HR activities carried out in the company. The result of the study can generally be used as an input for those who are interested in managing a garment industry to optimize their human resources process.

CHAPTER THREE

3.0 Heliacal Framework

3.1 Human Resource Management

The role of human resource management is to plan, develop, and administer policies and programs designed to make expeditious use of an organization's human resources. It is that part of management which is concerned with the people at work and with their relationship within an enterprise. Effective utilization of human resources, desirable working relationships among all members of the organization and maximum individual development are the objective of HR. The major functional areas in human resource management are planning, recruiting, employee development and employee compensation with welfare.

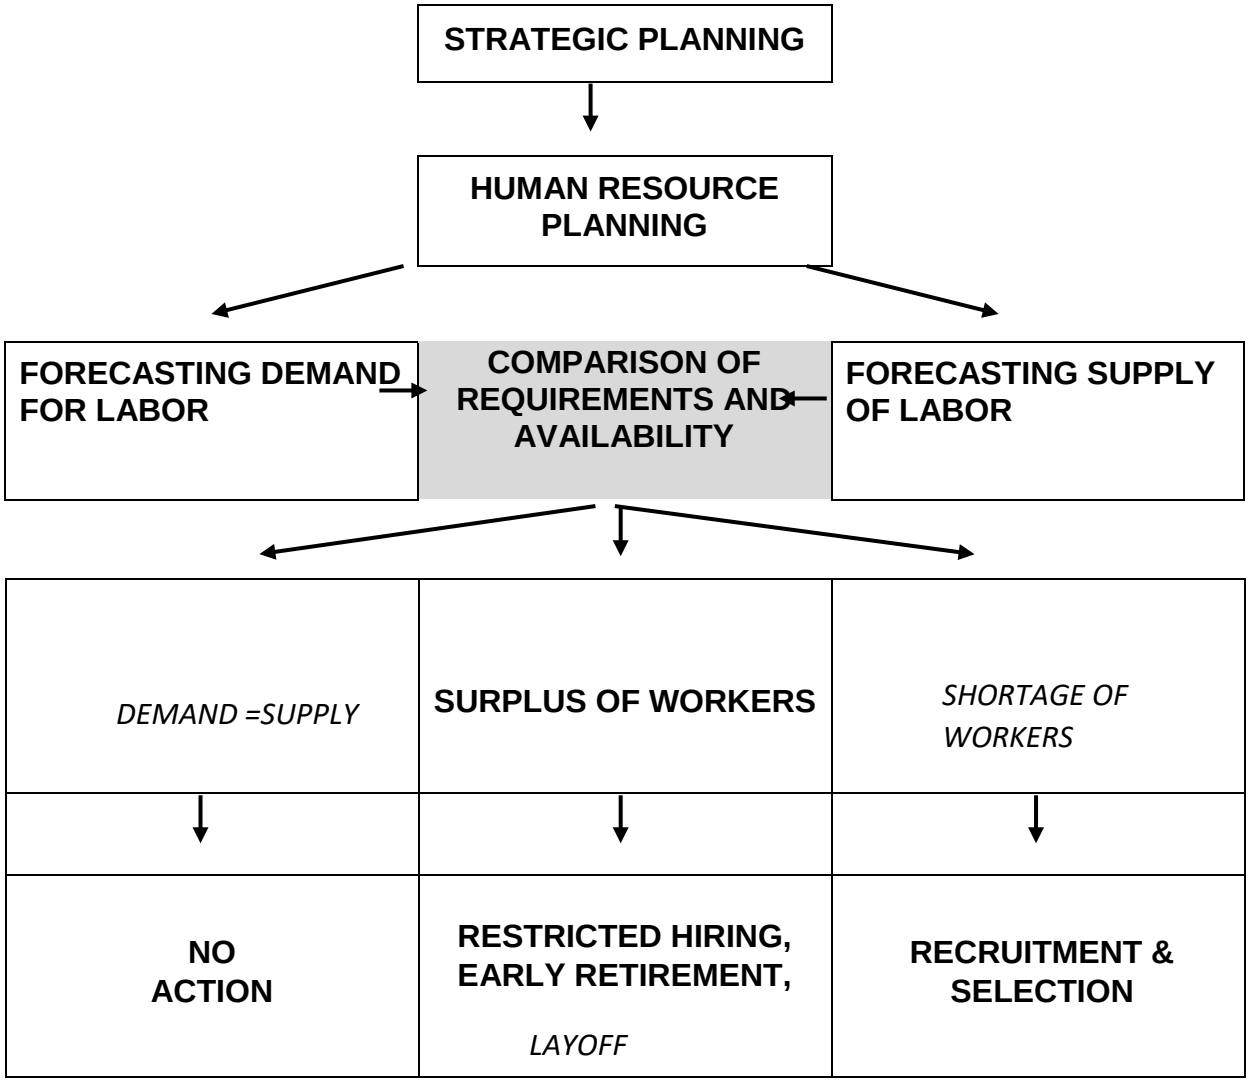

We know that the garments sector is a very labor intensive industry. If the labors are not handled properly then it can lead to really bad consequences such we have seen in the past like the strikes that occurred in Ashulia. The work that is done needs very skilled hands whereas the implementation of proper training is required. Whenever there is a riot because of salary issues it is the HR department that takes the initiative of handling the situation.HR department needs to keep in touch with the skilled workers so that whenever the need arises for labor they can be easily recruited without facing the problems of training employees from the start. Then everyday labors are leaving their job and new people are being recruited, so the issue of recruitment is always active. All the HR policies are very much in practice in Universal Menswear Ltd.

3.2 HR Planning

To develop HR strategies, it is important to refer to the organization's objective, and also a clear mission statement. In order for the company to accomplish its goal of growing the organization, it is imperative that an HR strategic plan is conducted. In simple words, HR management is managing all the people of the organization in such a way that a bridge could be maintained between top level-mid level and lower levels of an organization. HR professionals use different techniques of ‘Man Power Planning and Forecasting’. To get a job done and to get the job perfectly done are two different things. In this factory all department working on yearly goal plan. Universal Menswear Ltd. successfully maintains a proper manpower planning to run the company effectively and efficiently.

3.2.1THE HUMAN RESOURCE PLANNING PROCESS

3.2.2 DIFFERENCE BETWEEN RECRUITMENT & SELECTION…….

RECRUITMENT	SELECTION
1. Recruitment is the process of searching for prospective employees and stimulating and encouraging them to apply for jobs in an organization.	1. Selection is the process of weeding out unsuitable candidates and finally choosing the most suitable persons out of all the applicants.
2. Recruitment is positive as it aims at increasing the number of applicants for wider choice or for increasing the selection ratio.	2. Selection is negative as it rejects a large number of applicants to identify the few who are suitable for the job.
3. Recruitment involves prospecting or searching of candidates.	3. Selection involves comparison and choice of candidates.

3.3 STEPS IN RECRUITMENT PROCESS…….

The recruitment process consists of the following steps:

1. Recruitment process generally begins when the personnel department receives requisitions for recruitment from any department of the company. The personnel requisitions contain details about the position to be filled.
2. Locating and developing the sources of required number and type of employees.
3. Identifying the prospective employees with required characteristics.
4. Communicating the information about the organization, the job and the terms and conditions of service.
5. Encouraging the identified candidates to apply for jobs in the organization.
6. Evaluating the effectiveness of recruitment process.

3.3.1 THE INTERNAL SOURCE:

Job Posting

Publicizing an open job to employees (often by literally posting it on bulletin boards) and listing its attributes.
Organizations can make effective use of skills HR management system for identifying internal applicants for job vacancies. It is difficult, however, for HR managers to be aware of all current employees who might be interested in the vacancy. To help with this problem, they use an approach called job posting and bidding. In the past, job posting was little more than the use of bulletin boards and company publications for advertising job openings. Today, however, job posting has become one of the more innovative recruiting techniques being used by organizations. Many companies now see job posting as an integrated component of an effective career management system. A model job posting program was implemented at National Semiconductor. Posting are computerized and easily accessible to employees. Computer software allows the employees to match an available job with their skills and experience. It then highlights where gaps exist so the employees know what is necessary if they wish to be competitive for a given job. Amoco's career management system includes a similar type of job posting program. Openings in this organization are posted on a worldwide electronic system. If an employee applies for a transfer to a posted position and is turned down, then the person who posted the job is required to send the "applicant" specific feedback about why he or she was not selected.

Advantages	Disadvantages
• Foreknowledge of candidates' strengths and weaknesses • More accurate view of candidate's skills	• Failed applicants become discontented • Time wasted interviewing inside candidates who will not be considered • Inbreeding of the status quo

• Candidates have a stronger commitment to the company • Increases employee morale • Less training and orientation required

3.3.2 Employee Referrals and Recommendations:

Asking present employees to encourage friends or relatives to apply. When employees recommend successful referrals, they (the former) are paid monetary incentives which are called "finders fees".
Advantages	Disadvantages
• The employee's motivation to make a good recommendation • The availability of accurate job information for the recruit • Employee referrals tend to be more acceptable applicants, to be more likely to accept an offer and to have a higher survival rate.	• The possibility of friendship being confused with job performance • The potential for nepotism • The potential for adverse impact

3.4 THE EXTERNAL SOURCE:

When an organization has exhausted its internal supply of applicants, it must turn to external sources to supplement its workforce. The following sources are used for external recruiting:

3.4.1 Media Advertisements:

Organizations advertise to acquire recruits. Various media are used, the most common being help wanted ads in daily newspapers. Organizations also advertise for people in trade and professional journals. Other media used are billboards, subway and bus cards, radio, and television.

3.4.2 Constructing an effective ad:

Wording related to job interest factors should evoke the applicant's attention, interest, desire, and action (AIDA) and create a positive impression of the firm.

3.4.3. Employment Agencies:

Employment agencies or headhunting firms specialize in recruiting executive personnel for companies in various industries, e.g. Moonward Associates.

Reasons for using a private employment agency:

- When a firm doesn't have an HR department and is not geared to doing recruiting and screening.
- The firm has found it difficult in the past to generate a pool of qualified applicants.
- The firm must fill a particular opening quickly.
- There is a perceived need to attract a greater number of minority or female applicants.
- The firm wants to reach currently employed individuals, who might feel more comfortable dealing with agencies than with competing companies.
- The firm wants to cut down on the time it's devote to recruiting.

3.4.4 Educational Institutions:

Educational institutions at all levels offer opportunities for recruiting recent graduates. Most educational institutions operate placement services where prospective employers can review credentials and interview graduates. Most also allow employers to see a prospective employee's performance through cooperative arrangements and internships.

3.4.5 Professional Organizations:

Many professional organizations operate placement services for the benefit of their members. Professional organizations serving such varied occupations as engineering, accounting, legal, and academics publish rosters of job vacancies and distribute these lists to members. It is also common practice to provide placement facilities at regional and national meetings where individuals looking for employment and companies looking for employees can find each other-building a network of employment opportunities.

3.4.6 Unsolicited Applicants:

Unsolicited applications, whether they reach the employer by letter, e-mail, telephone, or in person, constitute a source of prospective applicants. Although the number of unsolicited applicants depends on economic conditions, the organization's image, and the job seeker's perception of the types of jobs that might be available, this source does provide an excellent supply of stockpiled applicants. Even if the company has no current openings, the application can be kept on file for later needs.

3.4.7 E-recruiting

Perhaps no method has ever had as revolutionary an effect on organizational recruitment practices as the Internet. More firms and applicants are utilizing the Internet in the job search process.

Advantages of Internet recruiting:

- Cost-effective way to publicize job openings
- More applicants attracted over a longer period
- Immediate applicant responses
- Online prescreening of applicants
- Links to other job search sites
- Automation of applicant tracking and evaluation

3.5. THE SELECTION PROCESS

Selection activities follow a standard pattern, beginning with an initial screening interview and concluding with the final employment decision.

The selection process typically consists of eight steps:

1. Initial screening interview

2. Completion of the application form
3. Employment tests
4. Comprehensive interview
5. Background investigation
6. Conditional job offer
7. Medical/physical exam
8. Permanent job offer

3.5.1. Initial Screening

As a culmination of our recruiting efforts, we initiate a preliminary review of potentially acceptable candidates.

The screening interview is also an excellent opportunity for HRM to describe the job in enough detail so the candidates can consider if they are really serious about applying. Sharing job description information frequently encourages the unqualified or marginally qualified to voluntarily withdraw from candidacy with a minimum of cost to the applicant or the organization. Conference call interviews or videoconferencing can help minimize costs during screening interviews.

3.5.2. Completing the Application Form:

Once the initial screening is completed, applicants are asked to complete the organization's application form. In general terms, the application form gives a job-performance-related synopsis of what applicants have been doing, their skills and accomplishments.

Applications obtain information the company wants. Completing the application also serves as another hurdle; that is, if the job requires following directions and the individual fails to do so on the application, that is a job-related reason for rejection. Lastly, applications require a signature attesting to the truthfulness of the information given and giving permission to check references. If, at a later point, the company finds out the information is false, it can justify immediate dismissal.

3.5.3. Employment Tests:

Organizations historically relied to a considerable extent on intelligence, aptitude, ability, and interest tests to provide major input to the selection process. Even handwriting analysis (graphology) and honesty tests have been used in attempts to learn more about the candidate information that supposedly leads to more effective selection.

3.5.4. Comprehensive Interviews:

Applicants who pass the initial screening, application form, and required tests typically receive a comprehensive interview.

Interviews involve a face-to-face meeting with the candidate to probe areas not addressed by the application form or tests. They are a universal selection tool.

3.5.5. Background Investigation:

The next step in the process is to undertake investigation of applicants who appear to offer potential as employees. Background investigations, or reference checks, are intended to verify that information on the application form is correct and accurate information. This can include contacting former employers to confirm the candidate's work record and to obtain their appraisal of his or her performance, contacting other job related and personal references, verifying educational accomplishments, and checking criminal records.

3.5.6. Conditional Job Offers:

If a job applicant has passed each step of the selection process so far, a conditional job offer is usually made. In essence, the conditional job offer implies that if everything checks out – such as passing a certain medical/physical examination – the conditional nature of the job offer will be removed and the offer will be permanent.

3.5.7. Medical/Physical Examination:

The next-to-last step in the selection process may consist of having the applicant take a medical/physical examination. Physical exams can only be used as a selection device to screen out individuals who are unable to physically comply with the requirements of a job.

3.5.8. Job Offers:

Individuals who perform successfully in the preceding steps are now considered eligible to receive the employment offer. Who makes the final employment depends on several factors? For administrative purpose, the offer typically is made by an HRM representative. But that individual's role should be only administrative. The actual hiring decision should be made by the manager in the department where the vacancy exists. Candidates not hired deserve the courtesy of prompt notification.

3.6. EMPLOYMENT TEST

A test is a standardized objective measure of a sample of behavior. It is standardized because the procedure of administering the test, the environment in which the test is taken, and the method of evaluating the individual score are uniformly applied.

TYPES OF TESTS

3.6.1 Aptitude Tests: These tests measure the ability or potential of a candidate to learn a new job or skill. Peculiarities or defects in a person's sensory or intellectual capacity can be detected through these tests. It indicates how a person would be able to perform after training and not what he has done or will necessarily do. It is thus used to predict the future achievement and not the past achievement.

The best-known and widely used aptitude test is general intelligence test. Special aptitude tests are also developed to measure special ability, such as clerical aptitude test, mechanical aptitude test, musical aptitude test, etc.

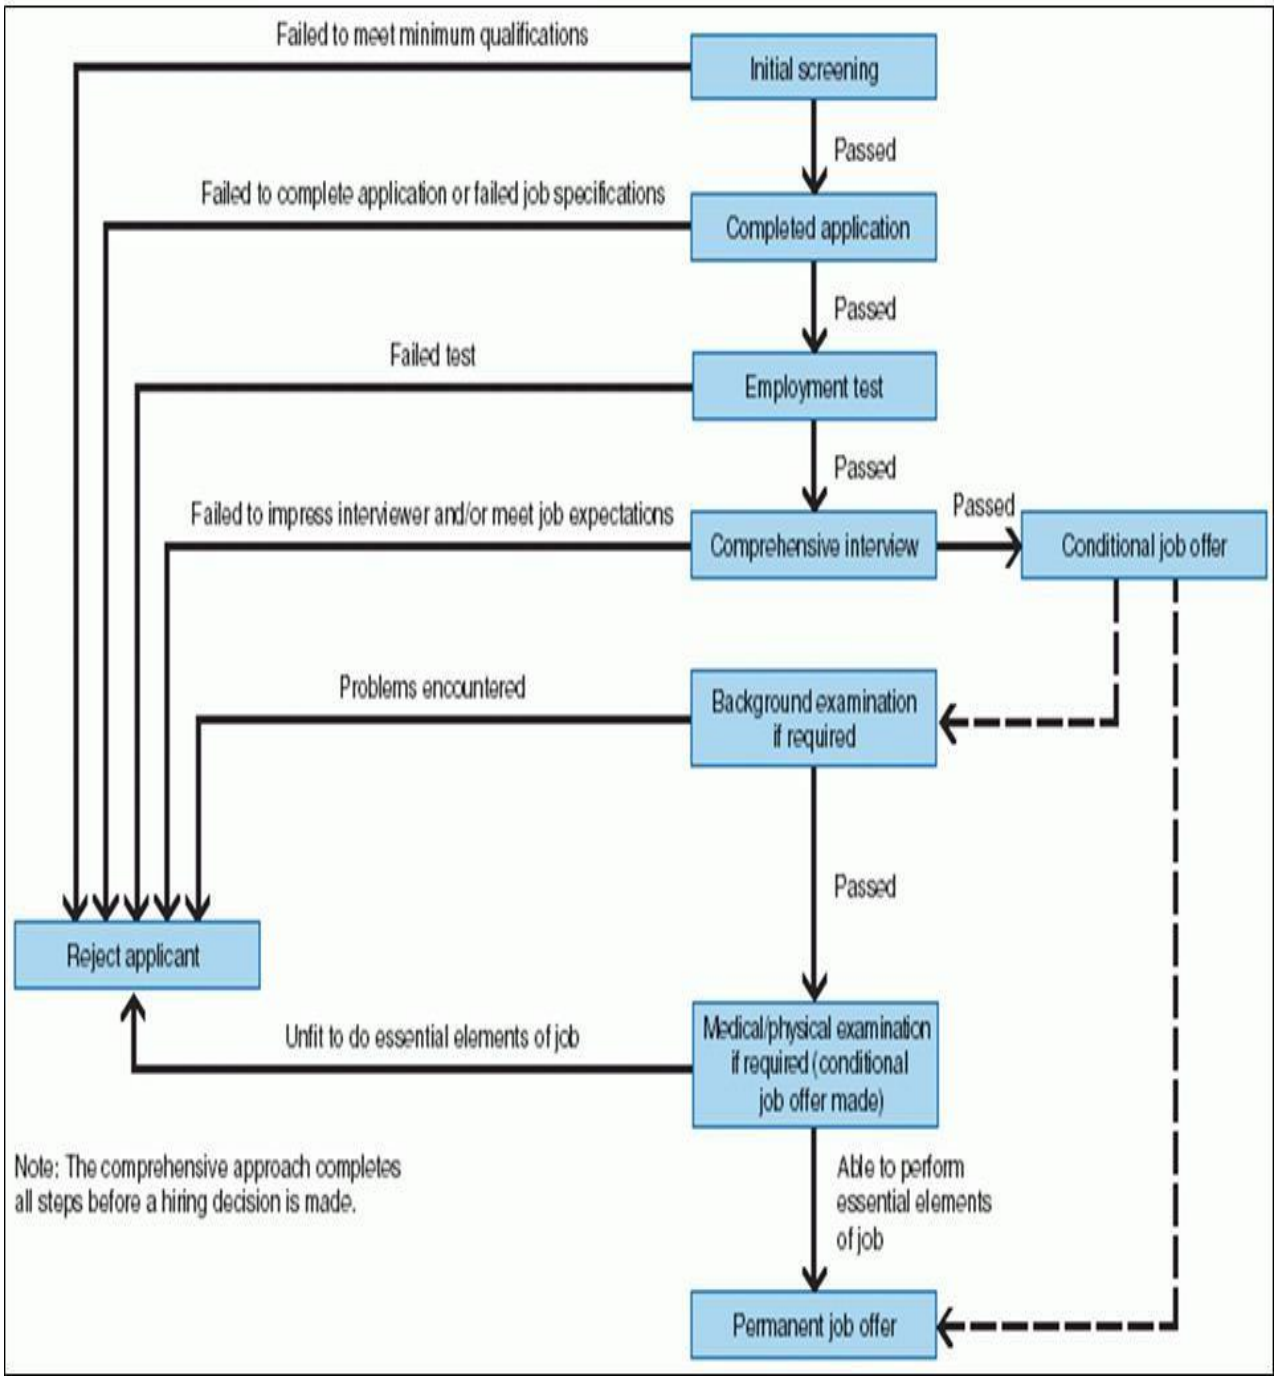

3.6.2 Achievement Tests: These tests measure what a person can do. These determine the skill or knowledge already acquired through training and on the job experience. These tests are of two kinds: Knowledge Test or trade test, and work sample test or proficiency test.

3.6.3 Personality Tests: These probe deeply to discover clues to an individual's value system, emotional reactions and maturity, and his or her characteristic mode. These help in assessing a person's motivation and interests, his or her ability to adjust himself or herself to the stress of everyday life, his or her capacity for interpersonal relations and for projecting an impressive image of himself or herself.

3.6.4 Interest Tests: These tests are inventories of a candidate's like and dislikes in relation to work. They are designed to discover a person's area of interest and to identify the kind of work that will satisfy him. A well-designed questionnaire is used to assess the likes and dislikes.

4.15. SWOT Analysis

Without the labor it would be almost impossible to run any garments company. Nowadays the workers know their worth and are demanding more and more everyday but the owners are not willing to meet their demands and thus we witness all these strikes and horrific displays. So the HR department has a lot of work in their hands and has to make sure that the labors are satisfied and are doing their job properly because if they cannot produce the products on time then they will miss the shipment.

SWOT analysis means strengths, weakness, opportunities and threats.

4.15.1 STRENGTHS

4.14.1.1 GOOD WONER STRUCTURE

Bangladesh is very rich in garments industry. Universal Menswear Ltd. is one of the reputed Garments industries at AEPZ in Bangladesh.

4.15.1.2 Financial Soundness:

CEO Mr. Chechnya Jayakody is the main planner of the factory. Under his dynamic leadership, the group has already been exceeded US$60 Million turnovers mark & employed more than 5000 people. The salary structure is better than other organization.

4.15.1.3 Skilled Human Resource:

There are two part of Human Resource Department. Almost 20 expert human resource people Works in this department.

4.15.1.4 High Ethical Standard:

“Universal Menswear Ltd.” is strictly following its ethical standard to keep the quality of products and manpower. If the candidates do not have sufficient quality, they are not recruited though they have strong references.

4.15.1.5 Equal Employment Opportunity:

The Company will maintain a policy of nondiscrimination with all employees and applicants for employment. All aspects of employment within the Company will be governed on the basis of merit, competence and qualifications and will not be influenced in any manner by religion, caste or region.

4.15.2 Weakness:

In Universal Menswear Ltd. management, employees from different places and universities are existed. There are various departments' like-Fabrics store, Accessories store, Cutting, Cad, Sewing, Finishing, IE& Planning, HR, Admin, Compliance, Merchandising, Finance and account, IT. There are twenty expects (Foreigner) are senior management controlling the factory.

Here, employees are from Textile University, BGMEA, DU, and National University etc. That's why, sometimes there may be lack of understanding due to cultural gap. Human resource department should alert to solve misunderstanding of other departments.

There is another major problem in this industry. As it is a garments industry, all garments production units are in same area. Sometimes some labor tries to break law and try to create dispute. This chaos is quickly spread out to other production unit. What HR does is, they intentionally turned down those labors that can create problem.

4.15.3 Opportunities

4.15.3.1 New and Better Agreement:

Universal Menswear Ltd. and CRP-Bangladesh signed a memorandum of understanding (MoU) to help the physically challenged persons. They also signed MoU in reputed universities for internship or attract fresh graduates. They can involve with new agreements so that people can know about this company. Sometimes their HR department organizes various corporate presentations in many universities

4.15.3.2 New International Gateway:

As Universal Menswear Ltd. only export garment products so they are high about their Quality. Often foreign buyers visit Woven manufacturing units and observe quality. Often various agreements are signed by them like- H@M. Those meetings are arranged by HR. There is also more opportunity for marketing people to go foreign country to meet the buyer and can negotiate the price in the spot.

4.15.4 THREATS

Upgraded Technology Used by Competitors:

In our country garments industry is well established. So, there are lots of other competitors is in this industry. If they negotiate with prices and give their product in low prices it can be a major problem. Their main competitor is India. Because in India the labor cost is not much high. So they can easily sell their products in cheaper prices.

4.15.4.1 Political Instability:

Political instability is another threat because, with the change of Government, policies are also changed. So, this is difficult for any organization who deals with foreigners.

4.15.4.2 Risky Position of Valuable Resource and equipment's:

As it is a garments industry, so many raw materials like cotton, thread and dyeing stuff etc. is imported from different countries. In these sectors efficient employees should be hired. If timely it is possible to communicate them, it becomes a great problem. Some necessary equipment is also needed for HR Department like- Computer, Laptop, Printer etc.

4.16 Job Responsibilities:

I had to visit different managers and departments to figure out how the garment factory works and how all the department works. How Brands Supply chain, Brand, Customer Development are interrelated. As an intern of HR, I had gone through HR activity in detail. At the same time how to inter-relate all the data from several departments and report it to the HR head. As an intern

I received all the support from my supervisor and I was involved with the recruitment process of Universal Menswear Ltd. I screened the CVs of the candidates; short listed them and called them for interview. In case of labors their CVs are not the usual formal CV but rather their national ID card or their educational background mainly covers it. Arrange interview dates, time and venue and panel for interview and coordinate accordingly.

But rather than the hiring there is sometimes the issue of firing employees. When the orders are not that much, to cut the cost the top management has to take the decision of how many workers to fire. It can prove to be a very hectic experience as well. As they are poor it is tough for anyone to look them in the eye and fire. Many incidents take place where the employee goes politely but sometimes things don't go so smoothly, they tend to argue. If any candidate or employee thinks that he or she is discriminated under any circumstances, then that person can report to welfare executive.

While I was in the organization, I had to visit the organization to review the organizational current manpower and resources. Competitive pricing is the pre-requisite for getting an order. Every order comes up with a technical sheet. In a technical sheet of an order everything are UML specifically mentioned. Merchandiser co-ordinates everything. After getting work order suppliers send pre-production sample to us. They have to send to the buyer for approval. Or sometimes they suggest for testing in local laboratory. After approval from laboratory. After getting approval from the supplier, they give the suppliers go ahead signal. In that time suppliers start manufacturing. When raw materials are in house, we have to go for a quality inspection of raw materials. After approved by our local QC (quality control) inspector we finally approve the raw materials for production. We have to communicate all update to the buyer or buyers' local agent. My research is mainly focused on qualitative study based on observations of the whole garments' HR department. During my internship period I also reviewed the HR policies of the company. The HR policies are as follows: Standard Conduct 2 employees are expected to conduct themselves on the job in a manner that contributes to operating effectiveness, productivity, safety and a harmonious work environment. If employees do not meet the company's expectations of performance and/or conduct, corrective action, up to and including termination may be taken. It is within management's discretion to determine what measure would be appropriate under each circumstance. To monitor all the activities, the authority has installed cameras all around. Harassment Policy nowadays this is a major issue and if any such incident takes place it can ruin the reputation of the company. So it is strictly monitored by the authorities. But if any employee feels that he or she is subjected towards any such behavior then that person is free to complain it to the authority.

4.17 Observation/Findings

What I found that-

1. The merchandisers have to be very dynamic and knowledgeable in order to carry out the whole process smoothly.

2. All Recruitment team should have update knowledge regarding local law and standards.

3. The company should arrange separate training program for the employees after TNA.

4. Recruitment team need to maintain a board interview system for staff recruitment to save the time.
5. To Maintain o% absenteeism and turnover they should analysis the lefty employee feedback report.

CHAPTER FIVE

5. Recommendations and Conclusion 5. 1 Recommendations

Although the HR activities of Universal Menswear Ltd. is doing a decent job at the present, but there is scope to enhance development both internally and externally. To streamline and strengthen the overall activities of the factory the following areas have been identified:

5.1.1 Recruiting more HR personal

Currently the company doesn't have separate HR dept. Admin dept. also works as HR dept. As in this company there is a huge need of HR, then there should be more HR personnel hired in order to make the HR team stronger and so that the employees can be handled for smoothly and all the operations in the company functions properly.

5.1.2 Providing more facilities to increase job satisfaction

More facilities should be given in order to increase the job satisfaction in the company. It is a fact that if the employees are happy then they will feel more motivated towards work and thus increase the productivity in the long run. Many facilities can be provided to the labors such as health benefits, occasional arrangements during festivals, air conditioning, health care and more importantly day care centers for the female employees who have children. The Reporting Officers must be more cooperative, cordial and friendly to HR department.

5.1.3 Introduce service employee career development

At first, the employees' requirements and needs should be fulfilled and then they can become aware of their customer's needs. We learn from this that it will reduce employee turnover and can contribute to increased customer satisfaction. This segment also talks about the empowerment of the employees. It is important because it increases employees' latitude in performing their daily tasks including solving customer problems and handling service failures, and it is related to increased frontline service employee performance.

5.2 Conclusion:

In conclusion I can say that this internship report is really essential for every student of business studies to get idea about garment industry. By completing this report, I have got overall recruitment process idea of RMG sector and these may be helpful to know about the technical and management knowledge of garments industry also these sector related organizations. This is a huge sector and yet to discover the whole.

From my thesis part, I have learned lots of HR related things that is being practiced in garment sector and also known this RMG sector is a larger contributing in our national economy as well as their people's improvement of livelihood & increase efficiency & effectiveness.

On the other hand, each and every company in garments sector should have proper and well planned HRM policies and their practices in their every function level of operation. Then we can ensure to get a more developed & economically strong country of us.
